

Meal Ordering Suggestions

Every district and every school has its own particular needs when it comes to meal service. Review the suggestions below to help determine which approach works best in your classrooms.

Elementary

- At the start of the day, teachers access the school menu and are shown two options available for lunch
- Students raise their hand for the meal option they prefer; teachers tally up the totals and submit one order for the entire class
- By mid-morning, Food and Nutrition Services receives the order sent by the classroom
- Meals are prepared, packaged, and delivered to classrooms by noon; students then enjoy their chosen meals at their desks

Middle School

- Students arrive at school and place their lunch order before allocated time period
- Lunch orders are received with student's name and classroom number
- Meals are packaged by classroom number and delivered for distribution to students
- Students enjoy daily meals at their desks

High School

- Students arrive at school and place their lunch order before allocated time period
- Lunch orders are received with student's name and classroom number
- Meals are packaged by classroom number and delivered for distribution to students
- Students enjoy daily meals at their desks
